THE COLUMBIAN EXCHANGE

What was the Columbian Exchange?

There was constant movement of people and products from Europe and Africa to the Americas. The large-scale transfer of foods, plants, and animals was called the Columbian Exchange. Important foods such as corn and potatoes were taken from the Americas to Europe, Africa, and Asia.

Some foods moved from the Old World to the New. Bananas, black-eyed peas, and yams were taken from Africa to the Americas. Cattle, pigs, and horses had never been seen in the Americas until the Europeans brought them. Deadly illnesses also moved to the Americas. They killed a large part of the Native American population.

GLOBAL TRADE

How did business change?

The settling of the Americas and the growth of trade started an economic revolution. This revolution led to new business practices still followed today. One was the rise of an economic system called capitalism. It is based on private ownership and the right of a business to earn a profit on money invested.

Another new business idea was the joint-stock company. In this type of company, many investors pool their money to start a business and share in the profits.

THE GROWTH OF MERCANTILISM

Why were colonies important in mercantilism?

During the Commercial Revolution, European governments began to follow an idea called mercantilism. According to this theory, a country’s power depended on its wealth. Getting more gold and silver increased a country’s wealth; so did selling more goods than it bought. Selling more than it buys results in a favorable balance of trade for a country. Colonies played an important role because they provided goods that could be sold in trade.

The American colonies changed European society. Merchants grew wealthy and powerful. Towns and cities grew larger. Still, most people lived in the countryside, farmed for a living, and were poor.
